RINKY

IN
"WHAT'S COOKING?"

"Time for bed, Rinky," called the little cowboy's father. "Tomorrow's another school day."

Rinky looked up from his comic book in surprise. "Didn't I tell you, Daddy? There will be no school tomorrow. Miss Bell is sick and because of the teacher shortage they can't find a substitute."

Rinky's father frowned with deep concern. "I don't like this a little bit," he said thoughtfully.

"Don't worry yourself another minute, boss," boomed the voice of Big Jeff, the ranch cook, as he poked his leathery face into the room. "I am just the gent to teach those wranglers, tomorrow."

"B-B-But, Big Jeff," sputtered Rinky, "you have to have a certificate to show you can teach. . . ."

"I HAVE a certificate, buster. You amble off to bed so your pop can call the school board and make arrangements," said the big cook, sternly.

The next morning, some of the class muttered in disappointment, while Big Jeff called the roll, and briskly heard the spelling lesson, followed by arithmetic and reading.

At recess time, Rinky noticed a little knot of troublemakers gathering together.

"Big Jeff isn't so smart," said one of the boys. "Let's play we're a gang of wild Injuns. We'll make so much noise that we won't hear the bell."

When the class trooped in after recess, Big Jeff did not seem to be aware that there was a great deal of wild whooping still going on in the yard. He simply locked the door, faced his students, and said, "I have always felt that youngsters should know more about the days of the early West. My grandfolks were pioneers, and helped each other build houses, fight prairie fires, and . . ."

"And Injuns?" interrupted one boy, his face bright with interest.

"Yes, gangs of troublesome Indians," answered Big Jeff, "but somehow, we always found a way to handle all our problems."

The cook stopped talking and opened a huge package he had brought with him earlier that morning.

"While I am telling you about the early days," he announced, with a smile, "I want each of you to munch on one of my fruit pies."

There was a giant cheer from inside the room, and the renegade group outside clustered around a window and suffered as they watched the happy activity around Big Jeff.

That evening at supper Rinky told again and again, between mouthfuls of food, the story of the day. He described in detail how popular Big Jeff was, how the rebellious boys said they were sorry, and begged the cook to come back the following day.

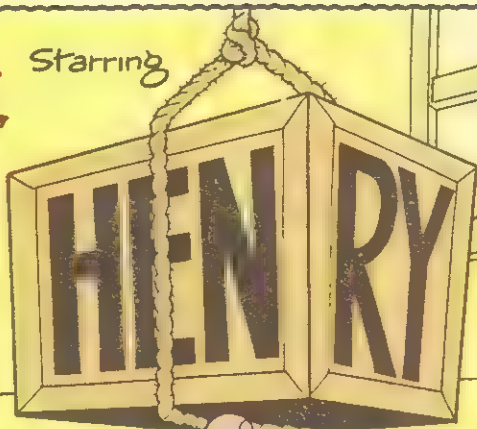

"I understand Miss Bell is feeling much better, and will resume her teaching tomorrow," broke in Rinky's dad when his son paused to catch his breath. "I hope Big Jeff hasn't spoiled the class too much, but I must admit he did a wonderful job in every way."

"I am proud of Big Jeff, too," Rinky's mother said. "I had no idea he had a certificate to teach."

"Excuse me, ma'am." It was Big Jeff, surrounded by the wonderful aroma of freshly-baked peach cobbles he brought in on a tray. "That certificate I have, states that I am a qualified COOKING TEACHER."

The BEST
BIRTHDAY GIFT
YOU CAN GIVE

Give "safety thru skill." Train me to handle, shoot a gun properly. Daisy is the best for this. Since 1888 Daisy has used the same safer spring-type action—the safer short range—the safer low "factory limited" power. It is NOT a lethal pneumatic gas, pellet or compressed air gun. I have checked the Daisy Training Rifle I want for my birthday.
